

Evidence-based practices are a way to ensure that consumers receive appropriate treatments with the potential for the greatest success to meet their individual person-centered needs.

Evidence-based practices are also a method for SCCMHA to ensure the best use of limited resources through the delivery of proven services and supports for persons with disabilities in the Saginaw Community.

Dialectical Behavioral Therapy Adolescents (DBT-A)

An Evidence-Based Practice

What is Dialectical Behavior Therapy (DBT)?

Dialectical Behavior Therapy or DBT, is an Evidence-Based Practice intended for persons with borderline personality disorder, especially those who engage in suicidal behavior.

The full model includes four modes of treatment:

- 1) Individual Therapy
- 2) Group Skills Training
- 3) Phone Coaching
- 4) Therapist Consultation

At this time, SCCMHA offers DBT-A Informed, which consists of the Group Skills Training for Adolescents and their caregivers. If there are not enough individuals for a group, or a teen prefers not to participate in a group, one on one skills training may be available.

Skills Taught in the DBT-A Model

- Core Mindfulness Skills
- Interpersonal Effectiveness Skills
- Emotional Regulation Skills
- Distress Tolerance Skills
- Walking the Middle Path Skills

DBT-A aims to help teens validate their emotions and behaviors, examine those behaviors and emotions that have a negative impact on their lives, and make a conscious effort to bring about positive changes.

Four Stages of DBT-A Treatment

1. Pre-treatment assessment commitment and orientation to therapy
2. Focus on interfering behaviors and necessary skill development
3. Post-Traumatic Stress related to problems focus
4. Self-esteem and individual treatment goals focus
